

The Post Office is the only safe, secure, reliable, regulated means of communication for our citizens. It serves all the community in one way or another: the business community (especially small business) can advertise their products for a reasonable rate; the rural community is served (its not profitable for other carriers to serve rural); taxes, insurance, utility bills, bank statements, greeting cards, and even what I used to consider junk mail, seniors get meds through mail.

In addition, Postal Service provides fairly decent paying jobs; especially for young service people who come back from tour of duty overseas and do not have a college degree. Post Office offers jobs with benefits to over 600,000 and all that pay goes back out into our business community.

The 2006 act of congress should never have happened and needs repealing. We went overseas to get the Zip codes so maybe we could take a look at how they have added services to their post offices in order to keep them running at least at a break even or a small profit.

We have taken the Post Office Services for granted until now - we realize if it is not saved, we are in trouble.

Until the electronic systems can be converted to public utilities, they are not secure and must have safeguards for public. Every keystroke I make is tracked and all these annoying pop ups are a nuisance especially when I am footing the bill.
